Summary:

This Non-Disclosure Agreement (NDA) is between Party A and Party B. It protects confidential information, including trade secrets, financial data, and technical processes, from disclosure to third parties without written consent. Confidentiality lasts for three years from the date of disclosure. Breach may result in legal action, including injunctive relief and damages. This agreement is governed by California law.

Parties:

Party A and Party B

Date/Time:

Confidentiality duration: 3 years from the date of disclosure

Money/Penalties:

Damages may be awarded for breach of contract.

Obligations:

Parties agree to maintain confidentiality for three years. The receiving party must obtain prior written consent before disclosing confidential information to third parties.

Risks:

- Confidentiality & Disclosure: Unauthorized disclosure of confidential information can lead to legal action and financial losses.
- Damages & Remedies: Failure to comply with the NDA's terms can result in significant financial penalties and legal repercussions.

Suggestion:

It is highly recommended to have legal counsel review this NDA before signing. Ensure all parties clearly understand their obligations regarding confidentiality. Consider adding specific clauses addressing the return or destruction of confidential information upon agreement termination.
